

Change

Life is all about change. Very few things stay the same. Each and every day our body is changing and evolving automatically in a negative direction towards our final end - death. We can count on that - we won't live forever...at least not our bodies.

The Bible implies that our mind, emotions, and will (our soul) will live in the presence of or separated from the presence of God, forever. We get into the presence of God forever by saying yes to the hope found in Jesus Christ. We enter hell, and separation from God from which there is no escape, by saying no to Him and to the free gift of salvation He provides by simple neglect or active resistance.

The impact of, or the absence of a father in a child's life, isn't just about physically sustaining, or financially providing for their children -it's also about being the voice that sets direction for his/her purpose in life, and forward into eternity.

Recognizing that we have failed as a father, or maybe that we just haven't been the perfect dad, is the starting point. NO man has done it perfectly, but perfection is required. That is why God sent His Son, Jesus Christ, to die for our sins.

He was perfect - He is the gap insurance- the restorer of the breach in our relationship with God the Father, and in our relationship with others. He is the only one that can fill the gap for man's imperfections.

True change always deals with correcting the mistakes that we can, and recognizing those that are now out of our hands. Change begins first within our hearts, as we turn by faith extending/surrendering our life to God with active repentance from our self sufficiency and sin. He answers that faith by supernaturally making room in our hearts - our spirits for His presence to dwell.

- The wounds of the father can't be fixed by man on his own. Restoring hearts is a supernatural act, and requires the resurrection power of the living God, Jesus Christ.
- He was the perfect sacrifice for each and every one of us, and He still provides forgiveness for the worst of all sinners.
- Inviting Jesus Christ into your heart and life is the only way to experience lasting change in your life, and in your relationships with others.
- Experience the power of the resurrection life of Jesus Christ today, and be restored back to God. That's the starting point for real and lasting change.
